The Exclusive Club of Travellers Racing to Visit Every Country in the World

Despite of the economic and political uncertainty in today's world, there is a small group of travellers who are possessing a seemingly far-fetched ambition - to travel to every country in the world.

This is a huge challenge, and an almost impossible task for holders of most of the world's passports. Even if you are lucky enough to own a strong passport, the cost of travelling to every country is enormous. Some countries require to pay huge sums of money just for a visa, before you even think about travel and accommodation costs. Other countries, such as North Korea, are extremely dangerous. Even if you would be brave enough to visit there, the government would not allow to visit without a guide to accompany you everywhere.

The benefits of travel, however, are wonderful and very rewarding. Communities exist everywhere online for those who travelled to over 100 countries. One such group is called Nomad Mania, and only those who meet very strict criteria are accepting into the group: "In case someone applies to become a member of our community, we choose a selection of countries at random, and then ask travellers to provide documentation as proof that they have visited them."
