

Answers

Below is the corrected paragraph. The correct answers are shown in red. There is a guide in blue to where you can find more information about the grammar points in this paragraph. All information can either be found in the 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' book or from lessons in the Fluency Space Academy.

The Exclusive Club of Travelers Racing to Visit Every Country in the World

Despite (See 'Key Verb Patterns and General Patterns' Lesson) the economic and political uncertainty in today's world, there is a small group of travellers who possess (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 1) a seemingly far-fetched ambition - to travel to every country in the world.

This is a huge challenge, and an almost impossible task for holders of most of the world's passports. Even if you are lucky enough to own a strong passport, the cost of travelling to every country is enormous. Some countries require you to / require travellers to (See 'Key Verb Patterns and General Patterns' Lesson) pay huge sums of money just for a visa, before you even think about travel and accommodation costs. Other countries, such as North Korea, are extremely dangerous. Even if you were (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 13) brave enough to visit there, the government would not allow you to (See 'Key Verb Patterns and General Patterns' Lesson) visit without a guide to accompany you everywhere.

The benefits of travel, however, are wonderful and very rewarding. Communities exist everywhere online for those who have travelled (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 3) to over 100 countries. One such group is called Nomad Mania, and only those who meet very strict criteria are accepted (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 11) into the group: "If (See 'if / in case' Lesson) someone applies to become a member of our community, we choose a selection of countries at random, and then ask travellers to provide documentation as proof that they have visited them."