Personality Testing

Personality testing is multi-billion dollar industry. Schools and companies use personality tests in order to find out more about potential candidates, and individuals use them to find out more about their inner-selves. Despite of the abundance of information that we have in today's society, the vast majority of people are still not really knowing who they are and what makes them happy. Personality tests promise to unlock these hidden knowledges so that we can all reach our true potential in life, and find the perfect partner!

Last week I tried a personality test for myself. I was asking 300 fairly strange questions about myself such as: "If you would have to choose between being lost at sea or lost in the jungle, which would you prefer?"

I was extremely surprising when the results showed that I am generally motivated by peace and calmness in my life. I might have been more convinced with these results if I wouldn't have a big argument with my partner only 20 minutes before taking the test!
