Personality Testing

Personality testing is a multi-billion dollar industry (See 'a / the' Lesson). Schools and companies use personality tests in order to find out more about potential candidates, and individuals use them to find out more about their inner-selves. Despite (See 'Key Verb Patterns and General Patterns' Lesson) the abundance of information that we have in today's society, the vast majority of people are still don't really know (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 1) who they are and what makes them happy. Personality tests promise to unlock this hidden knowledge (See 'Key Uncountable Nouns in Business English' Lesson) so that we can all reach our true potential in life, and find the perfect partner!

Last week I tried a personality test for myself. I was asked (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 11) 300 fairly strange questions about myself such as: "If you had to (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 13) choose between being lost at sea or lost in the jungle, which would you prefer?"

I was extremely surprised (See 'ing / ed adjectives' Lesson) when the results showed that I am generally motivated by peace and calmness in my life. I might have been more convinced with these results if I hadn't had (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 15) a big argument with my partner only 20 minutes before taking the test!
