

Answers

Below is the corrected paragraph. The correct answers are shown in red. There is a guide in blue to where you can find more information about the grammar points in this paragraph. All information can either be found in the 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' book or from lessons in the Fluency Space Academy.

Carrefour's Fight Against Price Increases

Carrefour, one of France's biggest supermarket chains, (See 'Key Verb Patterns and General Patterns' Lesson) has announced that it will stop selling Pepsi products because they have become (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 3) too expensive. When the products sell out (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 2) on the shelves, they will not be replaced (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 11).

This is the latest move in Carrefour's fight against increasing prices for many branded goods. Since September, the supermarket has been placing (See 'How to Use Verb Tenses in Business' Lesson 4) signs next to products what have decreased in size but increased in price, a process known as "shrinkflation". According to (See 'Prepositions and Collocations for Business' Lesson) Carrefour's CEO, Alexandre Bompard, "Customers can really benefit from (See 'Prepositions and Collocations for Business' Lesson) seeing exactly which products have increased in price. They are often extremely grateful to see this advice (See 'Uncountable Nouns in Business' Lesson), as it is often difficult to notice that a product has decreased in size or weight."