Calorie Consumption in the Western World

A new study currently takes place related to the consumption of processed foods in Western world. In countries such as the UK, the US and Canada, processed foods account for more than 50% of all calories consumed. Scientists linked these foods to many diseases such as cardiovascular disease and even dementia. One of the main problem related to processed foods is the mindset of the people who consume them. Food companies are accused to mislead consumers about the dangers of these foods. Many corporations interest more to profits than the health of the population. We are used to see ads on an hourly basis for foods which will potentially have a devastating effect on our health. This seems to be more of a problem in the West than in other parts of the world. If you would live in the Middle East, for example, you would be exposed to far fewer ads for processed foods. One other worrying factor is that it is much easier these days to get food delivered, which means that processed foods are much more readily available.
